

Coordination / Isabel Fernandes Silva

Structure

The working languages are English and Portuguese, though others may be included (French, Italian, Spanish, or others) in case there is a request for any of them by a large number of students. Translation is an essential tool in globalisation, which mediation between peoples and cultures. Nowadays, to become a translator, you must not only master languages but also technologies. The Post-Graduate in Translation, in its 24th edition, aims to provide those skills. Ours is a practical, hands-on approach that provides participants with both theoretical background on this field of studies and practical experience in translation and in the use of CAT tools. We aim that participants acquire or further their practical skills so that they can easily and quickly be integrated in the labour market.
